Charlie Kirk
@charliekirk11

Listen to MSNBC describe the freak, Artemis Langford, a man who forced himself into a University of Wyoming sorority and got a visible erection while watching the women change:

"It takes a very brave and unique person to do this, to be a first in a situation like this, and then to continue on..."

Yes, MSNBC is victim shaming and promoting the abuse of young girls.

Encouraging men's fantasies is not kind or inclusive. We don't coddle anorexic women - by saying "oh sweetie - of course you are too fat!" Why treat men differently?

Identity has very little to do with the scrutiny, if any. The actions of this person are what are being regarded.

Regardless of this persons feelings, they have now corrupted a rule set that was in place for women's protection.
Not brave, very abusive.

Men are men, no matter what they wish to be. They do not belong in locker rooms, sororities, bathrooms or sports with women.

I understand the hatred of America by the Eastern Hemisphere. He should be in a mental hospital instead of in a sorority.
